

Wearable sensors and machine learning for field-based biomechanical load assessment in sports: a structured overview of current research

